IMPENDING EVERYONE

Writer
Michael Andrew Collins

Director
Fraser Corfield

“This cannot be stopped, your history is impending. Everyone will know tomorrow, by the end of school, who you really are ...”

Someone at Elia’s highschool has got access to all the students’ browser histories. They plan to release them. What do they want? Nothing more than everybody at the high school finding out who they, and everyone around them, really is. Elia and her friends can’t let this happen. They have secrets that can’t come out, and only one day to stop them.

Set within a New South Wales high school, Impending Everyone explores what happens when we have to own up to the things we have said, when anonymity is stripped away and our desires are laid bare.

Due to the overwhelming success of the existing ATYP Foundation Commission award, the Foundation expanded the program to include a new work for 14–17 year old actors. Impending Everyone by Michael Andrew Collins is the inaugural winner of this award.
